

£100,000 of client money, held for review. Nobody to call.

Wise and Revolut are great for everyday payments. Six figures of client money needs a person who knows your account.

On Wise or Revolut?

Built for everyday payments. When a large client payment is held for review, there's nobody to call. It's your client's money, so it's your reputation.

On a bank?

International payments are a side-line. You get a call centre, not someone who knows your account.

"It definitely felt like an upgrade, just being able to speak to somebody."

What the upgrade gets you

1

A named person in London.

Your account manager knows your flows, expects the big payments and picks up the phone. No chatbots, no ticket queue.

2

Payments that go through.

Set up for six-figure, multi-currency payments from day one. If one is ever held for checks, we chase it, not you.

3

Get paid like a local.

Account details in your agency's name, so clients pay you in dollars or euros like any local account.

4

Protect the margin you quoted.

Fix a rate for up to 12 months when the campaign's signed, so currency swings don't eat your fee.

This is for you if

- ✓ You invoice clients or get paid in EUR or USD
- ✓ You pay platforms, freelancers or suppliers abroad
- ✓ You move £250,000 or more a year across currencies
- ✓ You've had a payment held with nobody to call

What happens after you get in touch

1

A 15-minute call.

Tell Tom how money moves through your agency: currencies, countries, sizes and timings.

2

Open an account.

Free. Tom walks you through it, and you get a named account manager.

3

Set up around your payments.

We set your account up for your real flows, so the big payments aren't a surprise to anyone.

4

Book your first payment.

Get a live quote and book it. Your account manager is there if anything needs chasing.

How one agency upgraded

A paid social and creative agency had outgrown Wise. Their biggest US client signed on a Friday and wanted to pay straight away. Tom had the account live by the Tuesday, with US account details in the agency's own name, so the client paid it like any US bank account. When they needed a US-to-US payment, one call switched it on.

“It definitely felt like an upgrade, just being able to speak to somebody.”

Straight answers

How do you make money?

A margin on the exchange rate. No fees. You see the full rate before you book.

Who holds our money?

FCA-regulated payment partners execute every transfer and hold client funds throughout. CurrencyTransfer never touches client money.

What if a payment is held for checks?

Your account manager finds out why and chases it. You get a person, not a ticket number.

Do we have to leave Wise or our bank?

No. Keep them for everyday payments and use us for the big, multi-currency ones.

Can we fix a rate for a campaign?

Yes. A forward contract fixes the rate for up to 12 months, secured with a deposit.
